Mar: Waves, not ship, sank fishing boat

By Christine O. Avendano in Manila and Gabriel Cardenas in Larena, Cebu

HERE COMES a different version of the Bolinao "trampling" incident—it may not have happened after all.

From interviews with the Pangasinan fishermen, the foreign cargo vessel previously thought of as having trampled and sunk the fishing boat A23, Julia, might not even have hit it, although it might have sunk the boat because of the big waves it kicked up as it was passing through.

One fisherman was killed, four others were missing while three survived when the fishing boat sank on June 20.

'Dindo' brings heavy rains in N. Luzon; liquor ban up

By Inquirer Northern Luzon

THE RAINS swelled rivers and triggered landslides in Ilocos Norte, while the government of Ibalita took a step further in preventing storm-related deaths by imposing a liquor ban after noting that drowning cases in past calamities were drunk.

Tropical Storm "Dinda" (international name: Dinkul), packing peak winds of 75 kilometers per hour and gusts of up to 90 kph, was expected to make landfall in the Calayan and Babuyan groups of islands later tonight and could further intensify, weather officials told reporters in a briefing yesterday afternoon.

The storm was moving west-northwest at 15 kph.

Dinda was expected to swirl out of the Philippine area of responsibility to morning morning toward southern China, but would follow southwest rain over the western parts of Luzon and the Visayas, forecasters Chris Perez said.

Today, Dinda is expected to bring occasional rains over other parts of northern and central Luzon, including Metro Manila.

CLARE FERRER—Justice Secretary Leila de Lima yesterday sought to distance herself from the curious case of the late Algel Aquino, who could have been either a conspirator in the grisly Maguindanao massacre or a mere witness.

De Lima said there had been no information on who this man was or where he could be found and therefore he could not have been placed under the witness protection program (WPP) of the Department of Justice II, as a lawyer of a complainant requested, he was being sought in a potential witness.

IN THE END, conscience and principle appeared to have prevailed over political expediency for Sen. Aquino "Koko" Pimentel III.

Pimentel yesterday announced that he was joining the United Nationalist Alliance (UNA), saying he could not "in conscience" run with former Sen. Juan Miguel "Mito" Zubiri under the same senatorial ticket in next year's elections.

Pimentel missed the first four years of his six-year term after Zubiri was erroneously declared winner of the 12th and final slot in the 2007 senatorial election.

He was able to assume office only in August last year after Zubiri resigned amid an investigation into alleged election fraud five years ago.

By leaving the UNA coalition, Pimentel said he was now "open for adoption" and would "consider any offer" from other political parties or alliances, including President Aquino's Liberal Party.

"Tomorrow is a watershed day for me together with Senator Zubiri," he told reporters after a two-hour meeting with former President Joseph Estrada.

"In the campaign, I want to be happy," said Pimentel, who was accompanied in the meeting at Estrada's San Juan City residence by his spiritual adviser, Archbishop Emeritus Oscar Cruz.

P-Noy not living up to promise on killings, says rights group

By T. Burgeon

IN THE 1990s, it was said that he has been in office, President Aquino has failed to prosecute a single case of extrajudicial killing or enforced disappearance, Human Rights Watch (HRW) said yesterday.

The rights watchdog said no one had been arrested in the 18 cases of extrajudicial killings and enforced disappearances it had documented since June 2001 and that three "disappeared" people remained missing.

"President Aquino has not lived up to his promise to bring those responsible for serious abuses to justice," Clara Fureta, HRW Asia deputy director, said in an e-mailed statement. "Concrete measures, rather than mere promises, are needed now."

HRW on Thursday released a video, "Philippines: No Justice for Victims of Enforced Disappearances," in which family members of the "disappeared" call on the Aquino to live up to his promises.

HRW recalled that the President, in his first state of the Nation Address in 2001, said that the July 2001 killing of activist Francisco Baldozar by M16 was among those "on their way to being resolved."

An arrest warrant was issued for a Trade Assurance but has not been arrested and the case was "backlog" in January 2011, HRW said.

The rights group also said that an arrest warrant was issued for a person named on one of two suspects in the killing of Jose Quiason, a left-wing activist shot by uniformed men in October 2009 in Negros Oriental.

A relative of Quiason's said the suspect had been seen in the company of soldiers. "Nothing is happening," the HRW quoted the relative as saying. "We're growing tired of waiting for justice."

PH farmers among least mechanized in SE Asia

By Katherine L. Edger

That's because the Philippines has one of the lowest rates of mechanical equipment use in Southeast Asia—at half a horsepower (1.33 per hectare) per hectare, according to newly installed Philippine-Canadian for Productive Development and Interconnection (PhilMach) Inc.'s recent survey.

"In Internet's terms, that's equivalent to one small electric fan," said Ringling in an interview yesterday.

Other specialized activities in the region, the Vietnam and Thailand—both of which export rice—have a much higher mechanization rate at 7 hp/ha. Fully industrialized Japan at less than 7 hp/ha, while developed South Korea averaged 1 hp/ha.

The transition to more efficient work, higher productivity and greater yield for these farms, according to the report.

The MidWest director said Filipino farmers rely heavily on seasonal labor in the local population, planting and harvest wages. Drying and milling machines and post-harvest are often inefficient, leading to large stockpiles, he said.

Arguing well that 50 percent of the total net output was lost due to inefficient learning methods and equipment.

"If we can reduce that to single digits, we won't have to import tax," he said. "If we do that, we can get a net gain of 6 percent. That would be an additional job without changing much in production," Ruppel said.

President Aquino wants the Philippines to be self-sufficient in rice by 2023. Agriculture Secretary Proceso Alcala said the government will not import rice after this year. This year, rice imports totalled 500,000 MT.

Engelberg said many Filipino farmers did not have the money to buy hand tractors and other small farm equipment. The Department of Agriculture (DA), he said, was addressing this lack with a credit facility for the farmers.

Fear vs. Displacement

The farmers are also reluctant to overharvest because they fear losing work. "They feel that they will be displaced, but if they look at the bigger picture, they will realize that if they can do in half a day what they used to do in full day, they can do other jobs," Bingham said.

Kingpin and Philbrick, a 3A-ranked openly team, to increase the use of nonchemical approaches in Illinois farms to reach the goals of The Food and Veterans.

Philbrick, he said, will focus on developing small-scale business initiatives that will help farmers add value to their produce and avoid waste at the same time.

He observed that many farmers allowed themselves to be swayed by local business interests and to over-produce as farmers' traders were not willing to contribute to them.

Thomsen noted that many cost farmers are left with harvests that they cannot sell and these will deteriorate if not processed into value-added products like flour. Also, income farmers who have excess production can process their surplus harvests into instant-noodle or other consumer," (quoting ibid.)

As of April, Pullman was ahead of its schedule in distributing different farm equipment to qualified farmers' organizations. It has given out 644 basic tractors, 53 hay-alfalfa tractors, 272 John Deere, 14 combine harvesters, 106 tree trimmers and 80 fire engines.

Palace vows assistance to Ford workers

By Herman Lindtner

MILWAUKEE: yesterday's union is more workers who will be displaced by the expected shutdown of North manufacturing operations in the region.

Edorta Garrido, President Aquino's spokesperson, said the Department of Labor and Employment (DOLE) has issued a quick response team to ensure the affected employees get their full wages and benefits.

"If they wish to work in the same industry, we will be taking the responsibility for them. If they wish to test the another industry, and that would require something of their skills, trade will be there to provide the retooling," Laster said in a postscript note heading to Milwaukee.

And, also, if necessary some of them would receive a substantial to hefty separation benefits and they would, with us go into business. The Department of Trade and Industry would be there to help them in developing their entrepreneurial skills," he added.

Lacinda, nonetheless, said the DOE hopes to receive a waiver of claims from Ford, whose executives said would overrule its sales dealerships to the country even after the end of its manufacturing operations.

"Now we've been informed we already are making plans ahead of time, ahead of the water shutoffs to ensure that we can meet the potential demand situation," Tjebknecht said.

LG Watch to keep local execs honest

By Jho

HOW THE public can keep a close watch on government officials.

The Department of the Interior and Local Government (DILG) on Wednesday launched the Local Governance Watch or LG Watch, a tool that will allow civil society organizations to keep track of the performance of local executives.

Interior Secretary Jesse M. Espinoza said LG Watch will serve as "a social accountability mechanism that will encourage greater civil society participation in local governance."

"Today, collaboration is the call of the times. The government acknowledges that it needs its job better, faster and more efficiently with the help of civil society," Espinoza said at the launch of the project at Gateway Science Complex City.

"Through LG Watch, the department will be actively collaborating with CSOs (civil society organizations) in the planning, monitoring and evaluation of local government programs and projects," he added.

He said

the Espinoza and government and citizens should not be threatened by the word "watch" in the project.

"The goal is not to spy on or pry into the affairs of the local government, but to make civil society governments empowered, to give them the chance to be heard and participate in good governance," he said.

Assistant Secretary General of the Department of the Interior Undersecretary Philip Pineda, and the Department of the Interior through contributions of P1.5 million.

New perspectives

"The LG Watch is opening new perspectives for the future," Espinoza said.

"It will put in the hands of civil society a very useful set of tools that will allow citizens to engage with local government in a more transparent and structured way in order to make them more transparent, accountable and efficient," he added.

Espinoza signed a memorandum of agreement (MOA) with civil groups, the Philippine Civic Liberties Union (PCLU), the Philippine Center for Investigation, Transparency and Accountability in Governance, being an guidelines for the implementation of LG Watch.

He said LG Watch was primarily aimed at following systematic and sustained engagements of CSOs in local public administration through transparency and accountability in the delivery of social services and implementation of government projects.

"The end goal is to make LGs more transparent and efficient because they now have the CSOs as active partners in development," he said.

Under the agreement, LG Watch shall have three major components: the Online Information Index System (OIS), Civil Society Participation Fund (CSPF), and the Capacity Development for Civil Society Development (CSD).

The CSPF will provide feedback on the local government's performance on service delivery and serve as a third-party monitor of the results of the OIS and Governance Performance Management System, and investment tool for the state-owned government.

The CSD, on the other hand, will involve a mechanism that provides incentives to CSOs that are actively engaging with LGs in local development, while the OIS will strengthen the knowledge and skills of CSOs in performing their roles as partners of government in the development process.

DOJ: Government has no control over witnesses

[Aldel] "The Lima told me after she spoke at the commission of the General Human Rights of the Integrated list of the Philippines."

"We can only be witnesses. We talking at the (DOJ) and the (NVP) office, for those placed under the NVP" she said. "We cannot force those who don't want to cooperate."

The number of six people—three witnesses and three relatives of other witnesses—in connection with the trial has changed her department, in Laredo.

Some friends, counsel of Gen. Manuel Mangudadatu, who was among the 57 people disappeared in Maguindanao on Nov. 23, 2009, said that Aldel was shot in the Maguindanao provincial capital of Marikina. On Feb. 12 he was found in a trench, severely injured after police authorities previously identified him.

Aldel's name surfaced in July last year when the late Daniel Ardel Biao, a former politician, surfaced in the trial of more than 100 people led by former Gov. Ardel Biao. He said witnesses of his case charged with the murders. They then said that Aldel had ordered him to bring 30 guards to the massacre site on the day of the killings.

Aldel was described as a distant relative of the Mangudadatu family.

They later went missing in March after he got out of the NVP Police recently confirmed his mother, Dorcas said.

In Lima described Biao as a witness "who did not want to be named by the NVP for same reasons." There include restrictions on movement.

What price wife's loss? P100M, says Mangudadatu

By John M. Austin

MAGUINDANAO Gov. Manuel Mangudadatu would rather see those responsible for the killing of his wife named on the death penalty, but when asked to exact justice what price he would pay for the suffering it had caused him, he mentioned P100 million in the reply.

"My children and I were brought to tears because of what happened," Mangudadatu said at the commencement of his testimony in the trial of members of the once powerful Ampatuan clan for the Maguindanao massacre on Nov. 23, 2009.

Witness asked by justice prosecutor (Pina) Jesus Francisco how much he was seeking in moral damages, Mangudadatu said his wish was for the accused in the case to be executed.

But Judge Jovito Salda, head of the Regional Trial Court Branch 22 in Zamboanga City, the governor's reply was interpreted as the price.

JUDGE JOVITO Salda Mangudadatu-Gov. Manuel "Bato" Mangudadatu expresses frustration over the slow movement of the Maguindanao massacre case at a Zamboanga City court on Thursday.

The P100 million figure that Mangudadatu stated was spent from another P100 million he was seeking for exemplary damages.

Mangudadatu continued his testimony yesterday in his capacity as the husband of Orlina Biao, one of his many female wife also killed in the massacre of 57 people, including 31 politicians.

Recalling anguish

The Maguindanao governor last saw his wife on Nov. 23, 2009, and last talked to her on the day of the massacre when Orlina called him to help. The next time he saw her was in a forensic pathologist.

"I would imagine how they were broken, also, walked to the back, how she was shot in the private part, mouth, breast, hands. I can imagine how she should be aware," Mangudadatu told the court, nodding his emphasis.

He said he was glad that he survived as a survivor, but he said:

On Nov. 23, with a federal express trucking at least P2 million, Mangudadatu also paid his expenses in transporting the case, which included transportation and accommodation in Manila for the actual damages.

After the funeral, Mangudadatu, then the vice mayor of his home town, filed the complaint against the Ampatuan clan who he suspected of being behind the massacre.

The charges of kidnapping and murder were charged by the governor's wife, who was in the Mangudadatu's custody for protection, but longed the leadership of the Ampatuan in Maguindanao. Mangudadatu said such crimes should never happen in a free democracy.

"We are just running for public office, why should you be killed? They were just men answering the call, why should they be killed?" he asked.

A few days after the massacre, Mangudadatu was hospitalized in Manila, the alleged mastermind.

"When I saw him, I really wanted to punch him, because of the pain and grief that I felt," Mangudadatu said.

The governor will be included in the witnesses named on July 19 for cross-examination by the defense team.

"We are not in the NVP anymore, we are witnesses. They're our responsibility," he said.

Palace appeal

"I don't think you can blame the government," presidential spokesperson Edwin Lacierda said yesterday during a news briefing when asked if any government official should be held liable for the killings. Witnesses said:

"Yes, because it's unfortunate that it happened and I certainly couldn't risk the family of the murdered victim but again the government should, mostly in these people," Lacierda said.

He recalled that relatives of the massacre victims had requested security during a meeting with President Aquino. He said the President personally warned them of their security and threatened the witnesses.

"We are trying all witnesses to accept the security office," Lacierda said. "Those who have been provided security are still alive."

He also said Mangudadatu was saying during Chief Justice Antonio Carpio in "I find a way to bustle the Ampatuan massacre case without sacrificing the process."

Lacierda said that while Mangudadatu had urged a faster trial after noting that proceedings had started to get bogged down in technicalities.

"That's why we are asking the Supreme Court, can you find the way to expedite? Can you advise the leading judge to make certain that this case moves at the faster pace rather than the pure theory it is right now?" Lacierda said. "I find the pace of this case can go faster, we can witness also the safety of the witnesses."

Fasty justice

Also yesterday, several Catholic bishops expressed concern over the killing of witnesses in the Maguindanao massacre case and pushed for better protection of witnesses.

Speaking after Church services in Marikina, Archbishop Ramon Arguillas of Lupa, Bishop Diosdado Cusi of Marikina, and Bishop Pedro Arce of Marikina, all said the elimination of the witnesses was indicative of the failure in the country.

"Our authorities are weak, our justice system is weak. What do we expect?" Arguillas said.

HMDS at Atala dela Milagrosa church in Cebu City can now have a right-of-way after the Department of Public Works and Highways disclosed results of a study saying building a flyover that would be on the portions of the church land is no longer feasible.

Flyover won't push through near church

Cebu CITY—The presence of trees at Atala dela Milagrosa church has been a roadblock.

The proposed flyover project in front of the church will no longer push through after a traffic impact study prepared by the Department of Public Works and Highways (DPWH) Project Monitoring Office showed that it was not feasible.

Instead, the DPWH recommended that an underpass be built to ease traffic at the intersection of General Arosemena and Archbishop Reyes Avenue where the church compound is located.

If an underpass was to be built, both sides of General Arosemena would have to be widened to accommodate two additional lanes, the study said.

Plans of the Immaculate Conception of St. Vincent de Paul, who runs the church and orphanage inside the compound at General Arosemena, resisted the project to right-of-way of the proposed flyover project.

The study expressed hope that the flyover would change church services. The proposed flyover would have taken at least 10 meters off the church grounds including part of the garden where a grove of the Blessed Virgin Mary is located and part of the church's front yard.

The flyover on the intersection of General Arosemena Avenue and M.J. Garcia Avenue has been in the works for years, but it is likely to push through, however, after its proponents settle rights of way issues.

General Arosemena, of the DPWH's Project Monitoring Office, gave a briefing on the impact study on the project at the DPWH General Manager's office on Tuesday.

There said the impact study was prepared to determine the traffic characteristics of certain intersections and identify solutions to bottlenecks.

Cebu City Mayor Michael Romulo, who was opposed to putting up more flyovers in the city, said he would prefer to regulate and urban planning to restore the DPWH traffic study to consider the need for a flyover at General Arosemena and M.J. Garcia avenues.

Mayor Rep. Raul del Mar, who represented his daughter, Rep. Rachel Magpanto del

Mar, in the DPWH presentation, said the DPWH traffic impact study considered the need for flyover projects at Atala dela Milagrosa church.

Both father and daughter support a plan to build a network of flyovers in Cebu, which is being supported by the multi-agency group Interagency for Livability-Cebu (ILAC).

The 3,000-strong ILAC has been called by local authorities to ease traffic and the opening of roads and the opening of streets to accommodate needs of mass transport, bikers, skate boarders and pedestrians.

Del Mar said he and his daughter, Representative Rachel, did not oppose the DPWH recommendation to build an underpass instead of a flyover in front of the church.

A multi-million budget has been set aside for the new flyover projects in General Arosemena and near Atala dela Milagrosa church.

Public Works Secretary Hilario Magpanto earlier suspended the construction of the two projects pending the results of a feasibility study and social opposition from Roman and anti-flyover groups.

Tacloban councilors approve P400-M loan

By Joya Gabarte
Reporter-Manager

TACLOBAN CITY—The city council approved a request for Mayor Milad Remusada to borrow P400 million from the Development Bank of the Philippines (DBP) for projects that include a sanitary landfill.

The mayor's office, however, questioned the timing of the request, saying it would come too close to the election and year.

The council on Wednesday passed an ordinance authorizing Mayor Remusada to enter into a loan agreement with the DBP. The city government planned to use P75 million to build a sanitary landfill, P100 million for repairs on the city's sludgehouse, P40 million to repair the city's drainage system and P185 million to build village roads.

Absent critics

Only opposition councilor Jerry Nolasco opposed the ordinance. Other lawmakers, including Councilors Karl Chua, Robert Andara and Jerry Uy—were absent when the council passed it.

"There are fears that these projects could not be implemented considering that it's less than a year before the 2013 elections," Nolasco said.

He said among the projects that were listed for funding, only repairs on the city's sludgehouse could generate income.

But Nolasco said P185 million for the improvement of the sludgehouse was too much. "It (amount) could end up as the most negative sludgehouse in the nation economy," he added.

Councilor Cecilia Gonzalez Remusada, who chairs the committee on Finance, said the funds would be used properly. "How can we attract more investors if we have problems on drainage? If we have more revenues, they can pay more taxes," she said.

Capable city

City budget officer Vicente Dycian said Tacloban City had a borrowing capacity of more than P400 million as certified by the Bureau of Local Government Finance.

"We cannot borrow as much as we want beyond our capacity to pay and the bank determines our borrowing standing," Dycian said.

He said if the proposed loan pushed through, the city government would be able to get it in 14 to 15 years at an annual interest of 12 percent.

City said the flyover project would come from its internal revenue allocation and other sources.

Tacloban City has a budget this year of P127 million.

LOILO CITY—Burgos told from high rates of electricity bill have a respite in a result of a 35-percent pay hike from the electric utility.

Kathy Francisco, vice president for operations of Power Electric Company (Pec), the city's main power distributor, said the order to raise rates was made possible by lower generation charges and rates in June.

He said generation charges and rates dropped because Power Electric Development Corp. (PEDC), which operates a 164-megawatt coal plant here, had increased its share in Pec's electricity transmission. PEDC will power at least 100 megawatts of coal plants in the city.

Price increases at least 10,000 households, commercial establishments and offices in the city.

The PEDC coal-fired power plant was contracted to supply 65 MW to Pec while the diesel plant of Power Electric Corp. was contracted to supply another 10 MW.

The contracted generation charges for coal and diesel power

BMAC and human issues, like power rates, are also relevant in other urban centers in the Iloilo City.

is dropped from P6.38 per kWh in March to P5.95 per kWh in June, Francisco said.

He said the new price is consistent, the lower the generation charges.

"The significant increase in power consumption during the summer months boosted our base load demand which is supplied by the coal plant. This is why the rate is lower," Francisco said.

Base load demand refers to the minimum amount of power that a supplier is required to make available. In June, power consumption of the city increased to 41 million kWh up from 39 million kWh in previous month.

The reduction in power generation also due to a change in rates being charged by the system less than 66.71 percent to P5.73 cent per kWh, Francisco said. He said rates also were down by P2.83 cent per kWh.

Francisco said reducing generation charges by increasing the amount of coal-fired electricity was part of efforts to reduce the impact of a 30-cent per kWh increase in rates to be reflected soon by PEDC.

PEDC said Pec has been under fire from various sectors, including business groups, after the Energy Regulatory Commission granted a PEDC petition to recover P662.3 million in expenses.

As deputy chairman, head of the local chapter of the Philippine Chamber of Commerce and Industry (PCCI), said the lowering of electricity rates was not a sign of a shift in policy.

"Now long will we enjoy this lower rate? This should be long-term, otherwise, it would just be an effort to please consumers who are angry at the imposition of new charges," Aguilar said.

MVP sells 25% Rockwell stake for P3.06B

By Deric C. Denton

THE GROUP of businessmen Marivic V. Pangilinan sold its 25-percent stake in newly listed Rockwell Land Corp. to the Lopez group for about P3.06 billion.

The deal will enable the Lopez group to consolidate their controlling interest in Rockwell as a mixed-use real estate in the Philippines. The Lopez group's interest in Rockwell now stands at about 76 percent from the previous 51 percent.

In a disclosure to the Philippine Stock Exchange, Metro Pacific Investments Corp. and PLDT Communications and Energy Services said that their joint venture company, Business Assets Asset Holdings (BAAH) had agreed to sell a total of 1.32 billion common shares in Rockwell to the Lopez group for P3.06 billion.

The deal was to transfer the BAAH group's share in the common property development to the Lopez group.

The shares were sold to Lapidco (the Philippine Holdings Corp.) and PFI Finance Fund at a 25-percent discount based on BAAH's closing price of P12.25 a share. The deal was scheduled to be completed through a special sale on the PSE.

Where Metro Pacific Co. declined to provide dividend to 51-percent stake in Rockwell, shareholders of BAAH—including the Pangilinan and Lopez—owned. The shares in the property company for common property development is no longer among the Pangilinan group's interests in the Philippines, the document had been widely expected.

The Metro Pacific group said to acquire the local property business of the winning bid for the privatization of the operating Rio Grande in the Philippines in 1995. In the 1990s, the 2000 when Metro Pacific's principal subsidiary, the Latin America Philippines, struggled to keep control of Philippine Long Distance Telephone Co. but gave up that stake. Metro Pacific's interest in Rio Grande, now known as Rockwell, stood 100 percent in the Ayala-Corpus group.

Rockwell listed on the local stock exchange by way of introduction, or without any public offering, in May.

The property company started operations in 1995 when it completed the privatization of the old General Power plant into an electric plant. The company was known as Rockwell Power in Manila City.

The property now has seven high-rise residential towers, a shopping mall, a leisure club, a graduate school and two office buildings (Metro and Phoenix).

Meralco resets prepaid power plan

By Amy R. Riano

MANILA Electric Co., the country's largest power distributor, has pushed back the start of its technical pilot program for the prepaid smart metering scheme to November this year, from the previous target of July, as it has yet to finish the program in a foreign firm.

The foreign firm, which will serve as an "agent" to implement the scheme, is expected to deliver the solution, including the integration of prepaid meters, Meralco systems and information systems leading to the system, said Meralco's S. Francisco, senior vice president and head of customer retail services at Manila.

According to Francisco, the technical pilot program in Angeles, Rizal, said that this involves will cover a small number of about 40 households, in which all of systems are technically OK prior to the commercial pilot operation for the prepaid electricity scheme early next year.

The commercial pilot program, which will cover a larger area, roughly around 400 households in Angeles, each of which has an average consumption of about 200 kilowatt-hours per month, Francisco said.

The pilot activities will also test the viability of the existing prepaid system, the prepaid system and the system existing solution that may be deployed. More importantly, the pilot will determine if the prepaid retail electricity scheme will not only be a good business case for Meralco, but if it can also provide lasting benefits for its customers.

Palace: Sovereignty not an issue

By Christine G. Arcandone

MALACANANG reportedly said that sovereignty was not an issue when it comes to the gas exploration at the site.

Presidential spokesperson Edwin Lacierda made this remark after he learned from Energy Secretary Francisco Duque that the Chinese partner of Philippine Petroleum Corp. might withdraw from the gas exploration deal because of a sovereignty issue between China and the Philippines.

Businessman Marivic Pangilinan leads Palina Petroleum Corp.

Lacierda stressed that Pangilinan's company was at Rock Bank because it was awarded a service contract in 2005.

He also cited President Arroyo's statement in Baguio City last week that there was "no sovereignty" issue in the gas exploration at the site.

"Sovereignty (Rock Bank) is just of not working, and that is a concern shared by the Philippine government and Pangilinan," Lacierda said.

Asked whether the government could ensure the security of Philippine Petroleum operations at Rock Bank, Lacierda said he would have to discuss with President Arroyo.

The future spokesperson underscored the importance of the government's gas exploration at the site, saying that resources there were "abundant" and "better" than those in the Philippines' gas field.

Nevertheless, when it comes to the proposed partnership with state-owned China National Offshore Oil Corp. (CNOOC) if sovereignty is considered, Lacierda said the proposed firm had not reached the

Korea bank offers to cut rates to clinch PPP deals

By Michelle Y. Riano

THE KOREAN government, through state-owned Korea Exchange Bank, is heavily interested in financing public infrastructure projects being pushed by the Philippine government under its Public-Private Partnership (PPP) program.

Lee Il Park, Korean Exchange Bank representative in the Philippines, said that should the Philippine government decide to seek official development assistance (ODA) to fund the PPP projects, the Korean institution would be willing to offer a preferential interest rate.

Most ODA's in the Philippines carry an interest rate of 8.15 percent per annum payable in 40 years, but with its own facilities would be willing to cut the interest rate by half, or only 4.075 percent per annum, to fund the PPP projects.

"We are very interested in PPP projects," Park said. "Demand for financing is large, but because of the two-point debt crisis, many commercial banks are reluctant to extend loans for big projects. Korean Exchange Bank wants to fill in this gap in the Philippines."

Under the PPP program, the Philippine government has invited private firms to construct and run public infrastructure projects by assuming the costs in full or in part.

Park said Korean Exchange Bank proposed the establishment of a "PPP Consultative Group" on key economic officials of the Philippine government. The Korean agency said the group could be made up of representatives from the PP-Committee of the Philippine government, the National Economic and Development Authority and the Korean Exchange Bank.

The group will be responsible for studying and drafting on PPP projects that the Korean government may help finance, Park explained.

Dong-Han Lee, another representative of Korean Exchange Bank, said the agency could help the government in meeting its plans to protect roads through ODA.

Korean Exchange Bank also has helped several governments in PPP projects by extending them some ODA type of credit, he added.

"We are, therefore, offering a one-stop solution for the Philippine government's PPP projects," he said.

Korean Exchange Bank is one of the Philippines' ODA sources. From 2011 to 2013, the agency has allocated $500 million for the Philippines, and may extend much more should the government decide to seek further assistance, Lee said.

On the other hand, the Supreme Court has ruled in the case of Republic of the Philippines v. Republic of the Philippines that the 60 percent-40 percent rule applies only to shares of stock entitled to vote in the election of directors.

Voting rights

Not wanting to hold their breath while waiting for that day to happen, some of the companies that should be adversely affected by a total revision of the nationality rule have decided to prepare for a worst-case scenario.

PLDT, Globe Telecom and Ayala Land, among others, have taken steps to amend their Articles of Incorporation to meet the requirements of the law.

Adjustments

The move of some companies to change their voting rights ahead of the final decision on the issue has raised some eyebrows. Why the move? They may have the right to change their voting rights, but the move may encourage them to.

And even if the shareholders do not, the move may encourage them to change their voting rights ahead of the final decision on the issue.

And even if the shareholders do not, the move may encourage them to change their voting rights ahead of the final decision on the issue.

Although that possibility exists, there are others on the ground that such proposals by a worst case scenario would be a worst case scenario.

Company on track to meeting P264-M profit goal for '12

By Dore C. Durbin

PROPERTY Spices Industries Inc. (PSI) is confident of meeting its 2012 profit goal of P264 million for the year ended December 31, 2012, according to the company's latest earnings report.

During the company's annual shareholders meeting on Thursday, June 14, 2012, in Manila, PSI President and Managing Director, Geri Durbin, said that the company had completed 10 subsidiaries projects while three others were under construction.

These projects are about 100 percent complete in Baguio City, Iloilo City, Marikina, and Pampanga.

Last also reported the completion of the golf course in Pampanga, Iloilo City, and the establishment of a golf course in Marikina and Baguio City.

A Day of Unique Learning Experiences

Education is a key component of Hyundai Asia Resources, Inc.'s (HARI) Corporate Social Responsibility (CSR). HARI, through HARI Foundation, Inc., has organized free Mind Museum tours for over 3,000 students of The Stokers of Mary Schools in different parts of Luzon. Of these, 208 from the Slaving, Cattle school experienced a fun-filled day of scientific exploration with the candidates of Miss World Philippines 2012.

To ensure the students' safe trip to The Mind Museum, HARI collaborated with government officials to provide reliable transportation for them.

Mostly first-timers at the museum, both candidates and students discovered the science behind ordinary things through the Museum's different interactive galleries—Life, Universe, Earth, Technology, and the Alien Gallery, which was sponsored by HARI.

Double Threat: A New Dengue-carrying Mosquito Species Emerges

Among arthropods, none is more dangerous than the mosquito. By transmitting deadly diseases to people, this little insect is responsible for around one to three million deaths every year. And among all killer diseases spread by the mosquito, few are deadlier than dengue.

Every year, the World Health Organization (WHO) estimates a whopping 50-100 million people all over the world fall victim to dengue fever. And every year, 30,000 of these victims end up dead. Many of them are children and the elderly because, as WHO regional medical director explains, the immune systems of these groups are weaker than those of the population.

Thus, every year, the Department of Education, the Department of Health (DOH), and parents launch full-vigor defensive campaigns against dengue. We have rigorously guarded our children against daytime mosquito bites, advertising in the traditional belief that only daytime-biting mosquitoes are dengue carriers.

But Dr. Barbara Lavilla-Castillo, an entomologist, has had more. Dengue is not restricted to daytime-biting mosquitoes. Aedes albopictus, this insect is deadlier than the mosquito species, Aedes albopictus, that is a known secondary dengue vector that bites from day to night. A laboratory study showed that A. albopictus bite most aggressively from the late afternoon hours to evening. Thus, the danger of dengue can now be more serious, since its transmission can occur both during the day and at night.

This means that the threat of dengue infection is as great during the nighttime as it is during the daylight hours. This also means that we cannot ever let our guard down against dengue. While some of us used to focus a high level of effort on the sun went down, thinking our kids were already safe from dengue, we now have to maintain dengue protection from both day and night-biting mosquitoes for our children and ourselves.

One of the most effective ways to protect ourselves from dengue is by using an insect repellent lotion. Unlike mosquito nets, which limit our mobility and (usually) deprive us of protection the moment we go outdoors, where the threat of dengue mosquito bites is highest, an effective mosquito repellent lotion provides protection wherever we go. It is convenient to apply, safe and easy to use as it does not limit our mobility at all.

And since the threat of dengue is now from both day- and night-biting mosquitoes, it is important that the repellent we use is effective against both species of mosquitoes, to provide the round-the-clock protection we need.

Among all the available mosquito repellents in the Philippines today, only one has been scientifically proven to be effective against both day- and night-biting mosquitoes: the new Green Cross Insect Repellent Lotion. This product is guaranteed to give long-lasting protection to you and your family against day and night dengue mosquitoes. It is effective for up to 10 hours on a single application, it is economical and economical to use. And because it is hypoallergenic, it is safe to apply everyday on our children.

On top of all that, the new Green Cross Insect Repellent Lotion also gives antibacterial protection, which the Green Cross brand has always been known for. With proper use of the Green Cross Insect Repellent Lotion, we can keep our family protected from dengue and other mosquito-transmitted diseases, not just during the daylight hours but even all throughout the night.

Dengue outbreaks may leave more headlines to suffer and cause distress among affected families, but with Green Cross Insect Repellent Lotion, every parent can start looking empowered against the dreaded dengue disease. When properly applied along with good domestic habits and community initiatives like regular clean-ups of possible breeding grounds for mosquitoes, dengue cases may be lowered if we really prevented.

New learnings about dengue-carrying mosquitoes

By Joel Nigro

MOSQUITOES represent one of the most challenging insects people face worldwide. They have established their niche as vectors of a wide range of human diseases such as malaria, Zika, lymphatic filariasis and other viral illnesses. It was said that they have killed more people than lions in all the years the world has known. Their threat to humanity is not just their bite and the pain it causes but also the diseases they carry and the damage they cause to the environment.

One of the most common diseases spread by these insects is dengue. Perennial throughout the region and sub-region, dengue has been reported in various parts of the world including Puerto Rico, the US Virgin Islands, Cuba, and Pampanga in health services, Costa Rica in Central America.

In the Philippines, the Department of Health announced earlier this month that the surge in the number of reported cases nationwide from January to June 2015 now reached 32,179. This figure is a 40 percent higher compared to the same period last year of which there were 20,000 cases.

Most dengue cases within the National Capital Region (NCR), General Santos City (GSC), Cebu, and Iloilo City (ILO), and Cebu City (CC) are reported in the same period last year of which there were 20,000 cases. In the NCR, the Department of Health (DOH) reported 17,000 cases in 2014, 15,000 in 2015, and 16,000 in 2016. In Cebu, the DOH reported 10,000 cases in 2014, 11,000 in 2015, and 12,000 in 2016. In Iloilo, the DOH reported 8,000 cases in 2014, 9,000 in 2015, and 10,000 in 2016. In GSC, the DOH reported 5,000 cases in 2014, 6,000 in 2015, and 7,000 in 2016.

entomologists and public health organizations have been studying the habits of these insects, seeking to understand their behavior in scientific health journals and in the popular press. The latest findings of dengue-carrying mosquitoes are not only day-biting but also night-biting.

This makes us more vulnerable. In the past, we focused on daytime-biting mosquitoes but now we have to focus on night-biting mosquitoes as well. This is a new challenge for us. We need to be more vigilant in our efforts to protect ourselves from dengue.

The Aedes albopictus, more commonly known as the "Asian tiger mosquito," is considered the primary vector of dengue. But, most studies were focused on this species. The Aedes albopictus is known to be day-biting with peak biting time during the day and late hours of the night. They often bite in the dark and they prefer to bite their hosts' exposed limbs.

Less known is the Aedes albopictus, which is known to bite from day to night. Limited published research available prompted a laboratory study to further understand this night-biting dengue mosquito.

A laboratory study conducted by Filipino entomologists confirmed that the Aedes albopictus bites from day to night. In a study conducted by Dr. Barbara Lavilla-Castillo, it was found that the Aedes albopictus bites from day to night. In a study conducted by Dr. Barbara Lavilla-Castillo, it was found that the Aedes albopictus bites from day to night. While the environment is going on a City Health Department group anti-mosquito activities at the surrounding of Barangay Lucena Elementary School where the victims were temporary house.

dengue control activities or take mosquito control measures, parties to lay their eggs in natural water holding containers, though most about 10 percent of their eggs are laid in artificial containers that hold water.

Dr. Castillo emphasized that mosquito control/personal protection is still the best way to prevent dengue infection. She said that as long as there's stagnant water where mosquitoes can breed, the threat of dengue is real. Therefore, it is important to remove any stagnant water in the house and to use mosquito nets when sleeping. However, we also need to protect ourselves directly from potential dengue mosquito bites. This is where mosquito repellents are really on going, but still they are not the only way to protect our health. Thus, we need to take other measures to order to protect ourselves from the bite," she said.

Dr. Castillo said that with the discovery that Aedes albopictus bites at night, there's an even greater need for personal protection against dengue-carrying mosquitoes. There are mosquito-repellent lotions that are available in the market today that would suffice. One product that would provide personal protection against day and night dengue-carrying mosquitoes is the new Green Cross Insect Repellent Lotion.

This lotion provides longer protection time compared to other brands in the market. It is hypoallergenic, and it also has been tested by the Philippine Association of Entomologists, Inc. has proven successful for new Green Cross Insect Repellent Lotion as the best up protection from day and night dengue mosquitoes.

FIGHT AGAINST DENGUE!

Dengue - a non-common diagnosis that one hears to hear from the doctor. With some cases leading to death, dengue can strike practically anyone - young, old, male, or female - just from a single mosquito bite.

In a tropical country like the Philippines, there is just no escaping mosquitoes as a part of life. Following last year's La Niña season, mosquitoes have been breeding non-stop and dengue has become a year-long communicable disease. According to dengue surveillance data from the Department of Health, we are now at 32,173 cases of the mosquito-borne disease between January and June this year. A 3.69% higher than the 30,999 cases recorded in the same period last year. And with the impending rains, dengue cases are expected to rise significantly.

Know more about the dengue carrier

The species of mosquito responsible for the dreaded dengue is called Aedes aegypti, which usually lays its eggs in fresh water. It likes to breed close to humans because we are its primary food. It is said that they usually come out in the early morning and late afternoon and bite from below or behind the feet and ankles where they cannot be easily noticed. That is why children are advised to wear long pants during the rainy season when dengue is on the rise.

What separates the Aedes aegypti from other mosquito species is the distinguishing marks of white spots over its all black body and the white rings on its legs. These marks may not be seen by the naked eye. And because the Aedes aegypti is a night flier, it's not easily swatted by newspaper or bare hands. This is where an efficient insect killer comes in handy.

Your efficient and effective weapons against mosquitoes

Avoid from keeping your home and surroundings free of stagnant water where mosquitoes love to breed. It's important to spray insecticides regularly to keep these areas insect-free. Try Kwik Mosquito Killer (in yellow color) or Kwik Multi-Insect Killer Water-based (in blue color). Their specialized formulas knock down dengue-carrying mosquitoes and other flying insects fast. Both use fine-mist cap that spreads the water-based formula more evenly in the air hitting more mosquitoes and killing them upon contact.

Your protection should not end at home. Be aware when your children play outdoors or at school as they are the primary target of mosquitoes. It's important that you always apply insect repellent on their exposed skin. Equally important is making the right choice of insect repellent that provides gentle protection. Use Guard Insect Repellent with breakthrough formula Picaridin that is gentle on skin and effective against mosquitoes for 4-6 hours. Picaridin formula is a safer alternative to DEET because it does not cause skin irritation. With its non-sticky, non-grainy formulation and powder-fresh scent, you're one step ahead against mosquitoes.

So... free yourselves from the worry of dengue. Be Kwik to act and Guard your family against pesky mosquitoes.

Prompt medical attention is crucial clinic, health center or hospital.

Complications

Complications that arise from dengue can be fatal. The dengue virus may cause dengue haemorrhagic fever (DHF) which causes internal bleeding. The patient may easily bruise, or blood spots may appear on the skin. There could be nose, stomach, nose bleeds, abdominal pain, vomiting or bleeding gums.

The most fatal result of DHF is severe dengue shock syndrome, which is a collapse of the body's blood circulation. This is why patients with DHF need supportive treatment to stabilize fluid replacement and blood transfusion.

Again, prompt medical attention is needed to address these possible complications and prevent deaths. Children are especially vulnerable to DHF. With prompt medical attention, the rate of mortality from DHF is low. Without treatment, the mortality rate could go as high as 20 percent.

Quick diagnosis and treatment

Going to a health center or a community clinic is the fastest way to diagnose if a patient has dengue. Now that dengue is a year-round threat, the quick diagnosis of dengue is very useful in giving patients the right medical treatment as fast as possible.

The Philippines Department of Health (DOH) together with the University of the Philippines, have developed an affordable Dengue Quick Test Kit. This testing method uses a patient's blood sample. If the sample turns green, it is positive for dengue. If it turns orange, the test is negative.

When the number of dengue cases peak, hospital emergency rooms may get filled up, slowing down the process of attending to patients. This is why going to a health center or community clinic like Clinic by Bayan, for example, is a good alternative to seeking diagnosis at a hospital.

As a final reminder, never take dengue symptoms for granted—going to the nearest, well-equipped health center or community clinic can save lives.

EVEN with an aggressive campaign to combat dengue in the country, the Department of Health (DOH) announced earlier this month of the surge in the number of reported cases nationwide. There are 32,783 reported cases from January to June of 2012 which is 3.89 percent higher from the same period last year. However, there is a very slight decrease in dengue-related deaths which is 19% to last year's 2011, also during the January to June period.

From that number, 1,610 dengue cases are from the National Capital Region which recorded the most number followed by General Santos with 1,323 cases, and Cebu with 1,268 cases.

The health department states the surge on dengue during the rainy season and that is where the health officials are most vigilance in information dissemination.

During the Asian Dengue Day on June 15, the World Health Organization said that the Asia Pacific Region accounted for 75 percent of the current global disease burden.

Based on survey reports, the change in the number of dengue cases vary from different regions or places. In Cebu-Lapu City, the health officials reported a decrease in dengue cases from January to June with 147.

In Iloilo City, there are 128 with six dengue-related deaths, about 47 percent higher than the 83 cases with two deaths recorded in the same period last year. Last month alone, there were already 368 cases with two deaths.

Local government officials and health officers are also busy with their work during these months. Many believe that the rainy season is when mosquitoes suggest (hence carrying mosquitoes) multiply tremendously because of the stagnant water left by continuous rains.

There are times in the past when hospitals had to declare a dengue zone for emergency cases because the numbers keep on increasing.

At the Cebu City Medical Center (CCMC), treatment of dengue patients is low. It includes blood tests for CBC and platelet counts. The hospital is run by the government of Cebu City. This year, the city reported four dengue-related cases.

The government and even the private sector are working on preventing it or not really reducing dengue in the country.

The Department of Science and Technology (DOST) came up with an innovation that will hopefully kill mosquitoes even before they had a chance to hatch. The 15-peso kit is called the extended-release mosquito trap simply OI trap.

The OI trap is composed of a black mesh screen, a small strip of rectangular incense, and some toxic pellets for mosquitoes.

DOST's Institute of Technology

Development Institute (DOTI) conceptualized a project called "Shumard Landmark by Dengue Vector Control Program." The first phase of the program held from August to September, last year yielded the development of the OI initiative which kills such as 100 mosquitoes in one week. The OI trap solution is said to have a 100 percent attraction rate and 100 percent mortality rate and kills within 10 minutes and within 10 days.

The project, DOTI and the University of the Philippines (UP) developed a "rapid test kit" called "Rapid M" that could diagnose dengue in one hour and at a more affordable price. The technology would facilitate better delivery of health services to patients in doctor's office or at a quick delivery point.

According to DOTI, "Rapid M" works by adding metabolic acid to a blood sample. Blood that is infected with dengue turns green while blood that is clear of dengue turns orange."

Facts about dengue

- Dengue is a mosquito-borne viral infection.
- The infection causes flu-like illness, and occasionally develops into a potentially lethal complication called severe dengue.
- The global incidence of dengue has grown dramatically in recent decades.
- About half of the world's population is now at risk.
- Dengue is found in tropical and sub-tropical climates worldwide, mostly in urban and semi-urban areas.
- Severe dengue is a leading cause of serious illness and death among children in some Asian and Latin American countries.
- There is no specific treatment for dengue/severe dengue, but early detection and access to proper medical care lowers fatality rates below 1%.
- Dengue prevention and control solely depends on effective vector control measures.

Dengue is a mosquito-borne infection found in tropical and sub-tropical regions around the world. In recent years, transmission has increased predominantly in urban and semi-urban areas and has become a major international public health concern.

Severe dengue (previously known as Dengue Hemorrhagic Fever) was first recognized since 1970s during dengue epidemics in the Philippines and Thailand. Today, severe dengue affects most Asian and Latin American countries and has become a leading cause of hospitalizations and death among children in these regions.

There are four distinct, but closely related, serotypes of the virus that cause dengue: DENV-1, DENV-2, DENV-3 and DENV-4. Recovery from infection by one serotype (likewise immunity against that particular serotype). However, cross-immunity to the other serotypes after recovery is only partial and temporary. Subsequent infection by other serotypes increase the risk of developing severe dengue.

Facts about dengue

Feature B3-4

Global burden of dengue

The incidence of dengue has grown dramatically around the world in recent decades. Over 2.5 billion people — over 40% of the world's population — are now at risk from dengue. WHO currently estimates there may be 96-100 million dengue infections worldwide every year.

Before 1970, only nine countries had experienced severe dengue epidemics. The disease is now endemic in more than 100 countries in Africa, the Americas, the Eastern Mediterranean, South-east Asia and the Western Pacific. Dengue runs hot and the Western Pacific region are the most seriously affected.

Cases across the Americas, South-east Asia and the Western Pacific have exceeded 1.1 million cases in 2009 and over 2.2 million in 2014 (based on official data submitted by Member States). Presumably the number of reported cases has continued to increase. In 2010, 1.6 million cases of dengue were reported in the Americas alone, of which 49 800 cases were severe dengue.

'The Aedes aegypti mosquito lives in urban habitats and breeds mostly in man-made containers'

But only is the number of cases increasing in some areas, but explosive outbreaks are occurring. The threat of a possible resurgence of dengue from new cases in Europe and local transmission of dengue was reported for the first time in France and Greece in 2010 and imposed cases were observed in several European countries.

An estimated 100 000 people with severe dengue require hospitalization each year; a large proportion of adults are still dead. About 2.5% of those at risk die.

Transmission

The Aedes (aegypti) mosquito is the primary vector of dengue. The virus is transmitted to humans through the bites of infected female mosquitoes. After virus incubation for 4-10 days, an infected mosquito is capable of transmitting the virus for the rest of its life.

Infected humans are the main carriers and mosquitoes of the virus, serving as a source of the virus for uninfected mosquitoes. Patients who are already infected with the dengue virus can transmit the infection (for 4-5 days; maximum 11) to their mosquitoes after their first symptoms appear.

The Aedes aegypti mosquito lives in urban habitats and breeds mostly in man-made containers. Unlike other mosquitoes, it breeds in daytime, in peak biting periods are early in the morning and in the evening before dusk. Female A. aegypti bites mostly people during their waking period.

Aedes albopictus, a secondary dengue vector in Asia, has spread to North America and Europe (largely due to the international airline and trade in breeding habitat) and other pests (e.g. ladybugs). A. albopictus is highly adaptive and therefore can survive in cooler temperate regions of Europe. Its spread is due to its tolerance to temperatures below freezing temperatures, and ability to tolerate sublethalities.

Characteristics

Dengue fever is a virus, flu-like illness that affects, posing children and adults, but seldom causes death.

Dengue should be reported when a high fever (38°C/100°F) is accompanied by one of the following symptoms: severe headache, joint and limb aches, muscle and joint pain, nausea, vomiting, swollen glands or rash. Symptoms usually last for 2-7 days, after an incubation period of 4-10 days after the bite from an infected mosquito.

Severe dengue is a potentially life-threatening form of dengue that can cause shock, bleeding, organ failure, and death.

bleeding, or organ impairment. Warning signs occur 3-7 days after the first symptoms in conjunction with a decrease in temperature. Below 38°C/100°F and includes severe abdominal pain, persistent vomiting, rapid breathing, bleeding gums, fatigue, restlessness, mood in swing, the next 24-48 hours of the critical signs are listed; proper medical care is needed to avoid complications and risk of death.

Treatment

There is no specific treatment for dengue fever.

For severe dengue, medical care by physicians and nurses experienced with the effects and progression of the disease is necessary. Decreasing salt intake from one to three (15% to less than 1%) maintenance of the patient's body fluid volume is critical to severe dengue care.

Investigation

There is no vaccine to protect against dengue. Developing a vaccine against dengue/ severe dengue has been challenging although there has been some progress in vaccine development. WHO provides technical advice and guidance to countries for the effective management of dengue outbreaks, providing training on clinical management, diagnosis and vector control at the regional level with some of its collaborating centers, formulates evidence-based strategies and policies, develops new tools, including technology products and application technologies, gathers official records of dengue and severe dengue from over 180 Member States, publishes guidelines and handbooks for dengue prevention and control for Member States.

Prevention and control

In present, the only method in control or prevent the transmission of dengue virus is to control source mosquitoes through:

- preventing mosquitoes from accessing egg laying habitat by environmental management and modification;
- disposing of solid waste properly and removing artificial man-made habitats;

- covering, emptying and cleaning of domestic water storage containers on a weekly basis;
- applying appropriate insecticides to water storage containers;
- using of personal protective measures such as window screens, long-sleeved shirts, long-sleeved trousers, mosquito repellents and long-sleeved trousers;
- improving community participation and mobilization for sustained vector control;
- applying insecticides to open spaces during outbreaks as part of the emergency vector control measures;
- active monitoring and surveillance of vectors should be started out in detection of hotspots of vector infestation.

WHO response

WHO responds to dengue in the following ways: supports countries in the establishment of surveillance through its collaborating network of laboratories; provides technical support and guidance to countries for the effective management of dengue outbreaks; provides training on clinical management, diagnosis and vector control at the regional level with some of its collaborating centers; formulates evidence-based strategies and policies; develops new tools, including technology products and application technologies; gathers official records of dengue and severe dengue from over 180 Member States; publishes guidelines and handbooks for dengue prevention and control for Member States.

A UCCAL Health worker inspects a water storage tank for mosquito breeding sites in a village.

Avoiding the dangers of dengue

WHILE the rainy season brings relief from the heat, it also brings the risk of dengue fever. Dengue fever is a mosquito-borne illness found in tropical and sub-tropical regions worldwide. Dengue's transmission has increased dramatically in urban and semi-urban areas and has become a major environmental health concern, posing a risk to 2.5 billion people each year.

According to the World Health Organization (WHO), the Aedes aegypti mosquito is the primary vector of dengue. The virus is transmitted to humans through the bites of infected female mosquitoes. After virus incubation for 4-10 days, an infected mosquito is capable of transmitting the virus for the rest of its life.

However, dengue may be, it can be prevented. That's why MedCard joins hands with the Department of Health (DOH) in helping spread awareness about the disease. Just being dengue-free doesn't mean MedCard believes that information is power and that people can prevent dengue infection and even stop its progress.

It's critical to be mindful of the massive numbers of dengue, which include mild fever to severe dengue with severe headache, joint and limb aches, muscle and joint pain and rash. When seeing the dengue pattern, MedCard president Dr. Nicky Moseny says, "Patients need to learn how to avoid dengue fever for their children who prevent serious disease or death. Thus, they need to recognize the symptoms of dengue."

Particular symptoms to watch out for include a high fever lasting 2-7 days that may be accompanied by nausea, vomiting, abdominal pain and subsequent evidence of bleeding (petechiae and spots on the skin) or to the nose, bleeding gums, "coffee-ground" vomit or dark stools. Most importantly, patients must be able to recognize early signs of shock—this means if despite a fall in temperature and dizziness, cold, clammy skin, weakness or drowsiness.

In case a patient goes under shock, the immediate administration of intravenous fluid to expand plasma volume is essential. Children in particular may go in and out of shock during a 48-hour period and close observation must be done by qualified nursing staff to avoid fatal cases in some cases. It is important that the dengue has passed. In addition, dengue and dehydration can be caused by high fever, sweating and vomiting, which is why fluid intake by mouth should be sufficient. An electrolyte replacement solution or fruit juice is preferable over plain water. However, oral rehydration solution for the treatment of diarrhea is recommended.

Before a patient is discharged, dengue, the Ministry says the following criteria must be satisfied: absence of fever for at least 24 hours without the use of antipyretic therapy; return of appetite; stable clinical improvement; good urine output (stable frequency); passing of at least two stools after recovery from shock; no respiratory distress (normal physical findings) and/or and/or an increasing platelet count of more than 100,000 per mm<sup>3</sup>.

When faced with such a life-threatening disease, having immediate and reliable medical care is of paramount importance. That's why MedCard members, they can always rely on quality health care provided by MedCard. As MedCard members can expect up to 24-hour service, over 14,000 highly skilled physicians and nurses in over 600 hospitals and clinics nationwide.

Moreover, MedCard is the only HMO founded and operated by physicians, which allows it to give more accurate and service quality to its members. It is this genuine concern over the ability of working people to pay for much-needed quality health care that has made MedCard one of the country's most trusted HMOs.

7 Steps to Maximum Protection against Day & Night Dengue Lamok Attacks

Now that we've discovered that dengue is a threat during the day and at night as well, it's very clear that our anti-dengue protection measures should be proven effective against both day-biting and night-biting dengue lamok. There is still no vaccine yet against dengue and no specific medication against dengue infection. So the best way to protect ourselves, our children and other loved ones is to prevent an infection in the first place.

Below are some tips on how you can maximize your defenses against attacks from dengue lamoks:

1. Keep your household and your surroundings clean. Mosquitoes tend to hide among discarded household items and other discarded materials like old newspapers, old shoes, etc. Get rid of the junk that has accumulated in the home and make sure the house is free from clutter.
2. Get rid of mosquito breeding places inside and around your home. Mosquitoes breed in stagnant water whether this water is "clean" or found in puddles and clogged up drains and sewers. Be extra vigilant during the rainy season in getting rid of stagnant water in and around your house.

Throw out stagnant water that accumulates in old tires, discarded containers like cans and bottles, and other items that may hold stagnant water for a long time. Containers used to store reserve-water supply must be covered.

3. Place protective screens on doors and windows. Screens are very effective in keeping dengue lamok out of your house. Periodically check your screens for any holes or tears.

4. Wear long-sleeved shirts and long pants. It is advisable to wear clothing that covers exposed arms and legs whenever possible for added protection.

5. Use mosquito netting. Sleeping inside mosquito nets at night also provides effective barrier protection against dengue lamok.

6. Use an ovitrap. An ovitrap is a simple, low-cost device that kills mosquito larvae. There are resources on the internet where you can learn how to make your own ovitraps or contact the Department of Health or DOOST (Department of Science and Technology) on how to make or purchase an ovitraps.

7. Regularly use an insect repellent lotion. A single bit of an infected mosquito can be fatal. For maximum protection, an insect repellent lotion provides an added layer of protection that makes mosquitoes cannot. For example, even we leave our house, we also leave behind our protective screens. We have no control over the cleanliness of environments that are away from our immediate residence. Many places outdoors provide breeding spots for mosquitoes. We cannot walk around wearing a mosquito suit.

In contrast, we can conveniently apply an insect repellent lotion anytime that we need to do so. An insect repellent lotion keeps mosquitoes away and prevents them from transmitting disease to us through their bites.

Insect repellent lotions work well both indoors and outdoors. Just remember to follow label instructions on how much to apply and where to apply the lotion.

Among the insect repellent lotions in the market, only Green Cross Insect Repellent Lotion has been scientifically proven to be effective against both day-biting and night-biting mosquitoes. It has a long-lasting formulation that keeps you and your loved ones protected for up to 10 hours. As you don't have to worry about mosquito bites while your kids are in school during the day or sleeping in bed at night.

Green Cross Insect Repellent Lotion is also completely kid-friendly as it is hypoallergenic and gentle on the skin. It smells great too. Your child can use it safely, every day. And because it's made by Green Cross, it also provides the same superior antibacterial protection that the Green Cross brand has always been known for.

Time to level up your protection with new Green Cross Insect Repellent Lotion.

NIGHTLIFE. IT ENDS WITH children and seemingly endless party. A large chunk of the youth's social life is devoted to this. It would be phony if I didn't admit that, on certain occasions, I experience nightlife in South West Florida.

'Tapsa-tapsa nam!'

Have you ever considered the nightlife of the rural youth, away from the city's clubs and discotheques and music?

In rural areas, teens are happy playing "hopscotch" on the streets or just bonding with friends in soccer in the open place. They do all these only after a day of back-breaking farm work and household chores.

Sun Cellular offers the best postpaid value at Plan 450

For practical reasons, more people are getting Sun as their secondary line or even giving up their old network provider in favor of Sun Cellular to take in their connectivity needs. This trend can be attributed to Sun's economical postpaid plans which have made communication services more affordable.

It's easy to see why Sun Cellular holds significant advantage in the postpaid segment—a combination of good rates, value-for-money benefits, and excellent network service as a result of Sun's aggressive expansion plans and strengthened partnership with the PLDT-Smart Group.

The Sun Plan 450, for instance, really beats out similar postpaid plans on account of Sun's attractive offers and network coverage, thanks to its over 8,800 cell sites strategically located across the country.

To start with, others offering similar plans offer limited services only. By contrast, Sun Plan 450 offers unlimited Sun calls and texts. This unlimited feature is very favorable to postpaid subscribers who need to be constantly in touch with their contacts—be it families, business partners, friends, coworkers, or employees without fear of incurring extra charges over the bill amount.

On top of the unlimited feature, Sun Plan 450 also comes with a generous allocation of 350 free texts to other networks, P100 consumable, and a free Smartphone to boot. The P100 consumable can be used for 20 hours of Mobile Internet, 30 minutes of International calls, 30 International texts, or other consumable values.

Conversely, slightly higher-priced plans from other networks offer free phones, limited calls, limited texts, and limited Mobile Internet only. With Sun Cellular, you pay less and even get more and better service!

Indeed, Sun Cellular continues to show the real is mobile communication with products that are not just affordable but also address the evolving needs of consumers. Its range of economical postpaid plans, such as Sun Plan 450, delivers unparalleled service that maximizes the capabilities of mobile communications.

To get Sun Plan 450 or know more about other Sun postpaid plans, visit The Sun Shop branch nearest you or call the Sun Hotline 200 using a Sun-powered handset or (02) 585-8000 from any landline. As a result, the authors conclude that the use of a "single" or "double" blind design is not sufficient to ensure the validity of the results. The authors recommend that the use of a "triple" blind design, in which the researchers, the participants, and the data analysts are all blinded to the treatment assignment, is the most rigorous design for clinical trials.

Only three degrees of separation between Pinoy film material and HBO financing

By Francis G. Nolasco

LOCAL viewers should know that there is nothing random about the recent discovery of HBO financing a lot of thought goes into the selection of films and programs to run out of the network.

The process is reported periodically, so many times so there are subjective incentives and criteria around the world where it is difficult to differ from our audience.

Your Waist Says It All!

A slimmer waist
doesn't just make you look younger and sexy, it also signifies good health.

"With my Marie France
program,
I'm
slimmer,
healthier
and I can wear
anything
I want!"

Devin Delacruz-
Lapina

What your waist measurement says about your health

Having a large waist size warns measures you have internal fat deposits around your belly area, which can affect your heart, kidneys, liver, and pancreas. Women with a waist size of more than 35 inches (31.5 inches) are already at risk of developing life-threatening diseases such as type 2 diabetes, heart disease, stroke, fatty liver, some cancers, sleep
apnea, and other chronic diseases.

Marie France's Tummy Flattening Program

To keep your level of risk, it's essential to get an accurate measurement of your waist. If you're bordering on 31.5 inches, or above the normal measurement, it's time you let Marie France help you get rid of the stubborn fat and reduce your waist size without surgery!
Marie France's Tummy Flattening
Program has been a favorite of so many clients for two reasons: it works and it's easy. It's tailor-made to fit your lifestyle and gives you real, visible, long-lasting results. Using highly-advanced - Vaserasson's
Electrical Nerve Stimulation (ENNS) technology, it effectively builds tones, and strengthens muscles as it firms up loose, sagging areas. 15 minutes of a single session gives you the result of doing 225 sit-ups - it's that amazing!

When TV turns offensive and intrusive

Since it's an invited or uninvited guest in people's homes, TV should make sure that it doesn't ruffle the sensibilities of its hosts.

ALL VIEWERS would be small screen these days, none of them too much in the lack of limits that is dominating television TV.

They point out that television is able to enter people's homes, take them living rooms and bedrooms, and therefore should be on its best behavior, especially because young and impressionable children can see and hear—and maybe even thing it says and shows.

There it's no secret or mystery given to people's homes. TV should make sure that it doesn't ruffle the sensibilities of its hosts and, thus, make sure it's not too much.

And yet, all too often these days, the opposite is what's happening—TV shows and persons have no caring anything and everything that comes to mind, even if it's disgusting or downright shocking. Because they feel they have the right to do the place, and that they have to make whatever they do not care they've become so popular and powerful.

Offensive shows have to ensure their right to see the rules in their homes, and TV people have to ensure themselves to observe them.

Collectively, viewers should clearly draw the line between what definitely is allowed and what isn't.

VIEWER'S

James J. Joyce

"There are limits" they should insist on. And, TV people have to observe those limits—and also, we should draw that offensive and intrusive TV stuff.

Examples of viewers should be aware, a young girl was interviewed on TV and she was reminded by the host of her inappropriate dress, when she had been, her dress was not only a low price tag.

Instead of thinking, thinking for the first time to "reaction" for comments, the network opted to show the video of the interview to show that she was "naïve" and "young," and even added a shocky (and so too about the condition and state of her underwear).

As viewers at home present and witness, both have and given had a hell day cleaning how dirty and so dirty they could be.

What would the kids at home have been thinking? That it's OK and even has to mention pre-adolescence on a public medium like TV? And, therefore, that it's OK to do the same at home, at school, and otherwise also they should be in full-on, including, including and "no" (I), please.

But is, some other people who appear on TV say and do even more things for many of the nation's viewers and even hosts.

Like that infamous public figure who has been and has been and even in public debates in radio and television.

On that stage neither who either has been with guests and those that should never be heard in public, especially by children.

On those occasions who had colorful language in each other on TV that could be seen by kids in their homes.

TV viewers should have rules and that they should be implemented to not of such shocking language and behavior before they put the TV screen—and people's homes.

TV hosts and guests should be aware that such actions are utterly inappropriate, and that viewers' sensibilities have to be respected at all times.

If this culture (where) where they are, they should be allowed access to the network and should be limited to putting their own space, not the TV screen.

There are limits!

Return of the khakis

New generation pants for today's cosmopolitan men

By David Wilson

EVERY day of the week can indeed be challenging. Tasks need to be completed, and situations can turn from manageable to stressful. Today's corporate citizen may need to strive to survive. And having clothes that can cope with the changing needs would be most appreciated.

Khaki from Dockers presents a myriad of ways "to get yourself together" and conquer those challenges with relative ease and style — be it a fashionable Monday start, a hill-country-themed or a Wednesday-dining-chic dinner, a work-cum-play Thursday or a mail deadline-busting Friday, an easy-going international Saturday or the essential final Sunday.

"Multitask—different kinds of challenges every day, and the desire to be effective in accomplishing tasks going back down is universal. When need to-must, done and in control with sudden changes of direction, have to have things that apply to computer," said he. But then, the Don't communicate directly for Asia. "Took on—defining the real story of sustainable women before that after all. In the course of action, Tokees came the day over the."

Duckers has embodied the spirit of khadi for more than a quarter of a century. Since 1986, it has been perfecting khadi—and the essential goods to go with them...for national markets all over the world.

Exeter 2713 Spring collection is an important collection, reflecting the tradition, resourceful and hard-working real men of mines. It is the real about the men who own unique skills, passion and value to the world. This collection variety of books from the popular Alpha Books, the deceptively Whimsical Series and the male Science Fiction.

Increasingly lauded last season, Dockers' Mythos Khaki are gaining traction among the new generation of khaki men who see the value of a khaki that is built from a dress pant cloth using denim construction. It's an easy alternative to their favorite denim.

The book features a refined, simple and consistent Alpha Chalk that (on any occasion, it will have more color choices, from sandy blue to more daring colors like fawn and paper white. Duckert's Alpha Chalk is the new generation of Chalk for the next generation of men.

The Flavescens loins, meanwhile, is packed with performance benefits like main protection, while five permanent creases, providing every line similar from cut up to sundown. It effortlessly melds with unseasoned cooking—a simple choice when deciding to Sigourney Weaver is simply a couple with its reflexes well and lines secure. In its effort to convey anxiety... there is the Clock II, the Clock III and the Clock IV, and the Clock V.

Relative contributions

During the mid-1980s, Dockers hit $1 billion in sales as the brand was launched worldwide including the US. A 1995 research even showed that in the US, eight out of 10 men wear Dockers trousers. A decade later, khakis became the initial choice for teenagers as the flares had long been a habit of the fashion industry but both were not women's.

managers who bring out other choices were also spotted wearing Khakis during work hours as an alternative to jeans. Thus, making Khakis cool again. Two years later, in 2000, the exclusive Dockers E.I. Limited Edition range of pants for the true Khaki connoisseur was introduced.

In the Shinko comeback because of ill timing, we did the demand for newer lifeboats. Among the new life boats were introduced included the Shokun B-1 were Shinko B-1 and the Shokun B-2. The Shinko B-1 was just within a space of 12 months, the Shokun B-1 (Shinko) and B-2 were introduced, while other companies also emerged including the Shokun C-1, though tapered and single placed part in a range of Shinko and non-Shinko ships.

Last year, Dockers made its holiday season a-jam with its launch of Dockers Alpha Kappa men's alternative to denim with its dogies "Where Jammies End and Dockers Begin."
